CPS: 'We Want Answers'

By: Ashmar Mandou

Its unique history of how it came to be built in the Little Village community has proven to be a badge of honor for most of its residents. Born out of a hunger strike, Social Justice High School (SoJo) arouse with the purpose to provide stellar education while foster leadership skills to any student who entered its doors.

"For the past three years that I have been in SoJo, I can say from an academic and social standpoint it has gotten better and better," said Rocio Meza, 17, a senior at SoJo, who has aspirations to attend either Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) or Stanford University.

So it came as a surprise to her and her classmates on the first day of school August 13th when they noticed SoJo underwent a major overhaul to its 2012-2013 academic year, which included a new principal selected by CPS and the elimination of several Advanced Placement (AP) classes, along with veteran teachers.

"These changes happened without warning," said Meza. "No one told us we were getting a new principal because it was already decided who that would be for this year. And then to take away three AP classes without a valid reason from our new principal, I knew at that moment we needed to do something."

The action taken by CPS to remove Advisory Local School Council (ALSC) selection Principal Kathy Farr and replace her with interim principal Ms. Marissa Velazquez, who does not hold any prior experience in overseeing a school, is yet another contradiction to CPS Chief Executive Officer Jean-Claude Brizard's mission to improve the quality of education in low-income Latino and African-American neighborhoods, stated Patricia Buenrostro, an original hunger striker and past Local School Council (LSC) member. Buenrostro vehemently believes the decision to make drastic changes without the input of SoJo's teachers, students, and parents are a direct affront to the very spirit of Social Justice High School.

"The foundation from which Social Justice

"The foundation from which Social Justice High School was built on was from unity and the need to rectify an ongoing injustice," said Buenrostro.

CPS: We Want...

"What set SoJo apart was its strong connection between teachers and parents, but now that's changed."

Immediately following the changes, students, including Meza, staged a sit-in to demand CPS officials reverse the damage they have caused and restore the original plan for the school Unfortunately, vear. answers were not given which then resulted in a community forum August 23rd that was attended by Principal Velazquez, CPS Instructional Coordinator Maria Amador, and the Chief of High School Support Anthony According to Spivy. Meza and Buenrostro, the forum served as a disappointment that left many attendees frustrated as not one of the CPS officials was able to provide insight to why the changes had taken place.

'What was more shocking was the fact that CPS denied entry officials to staff members," said Buenrostro. "How were we supposed to discuss the academic schedule without teachers?"

Instead, and Buenrostro said a power point presentation was given to explain the reasoning behind elimination the several classes with the implementation "strategic classes." ofDuring the presentation, Velazquez was said to have used outdated test scores from 2010-2011 to demonstrate the need to remove advanced courses. However, on the CPS website, it showed students met or exceeded state standards in PSAE Reading by 23 percent and PSAE Math by 19 percent. In AP exam scores 35 percent of students, an increase from 33 percent, met the state standard.

"As a parent, I put full trust in the quality of education SoJo is giving my child," Meza's said mother Maricela, who attended the community forum last Thursday. "But now, with these changes, with the fact that CPS has let quality teachers go, with the fact that parents were not told of these changes; how we can we as parents let them get away with Maricela went on to describe the forum as pointless and destructive and worries SoJo is on the chopping block to close its doors or be operated by private investors. "Our voices need to be taken into account," said Maricela. "Our children's education is at risk and they need to listen to us!"

Opened Social Justice High School is one of four high schools that comprise Little Village High School Campus. The other high schools Multicultural include, Academy of Scholarship, Infinity Math, Science and Technology, and World Language. was constructed after 14 parents went on a hunger strike to demand CPS build high schools in the Little Village community. The West Side Chief Schools Theresa Plascencia was not in attendance to offer up any resolutions.

"We don't only hold Ms. Velazquez and the network chief Ms. Plascencia responsible for what is happening to SoJo," said Buenrostro.
"We hold [CPS CEO]
Jean-Claude Brizard and Mayor Rahm Emanuel responsible for not stepping in and meeting with SoJo parents and teachers.'

Buenrostro suggests creating a LSC in all four high schools, which will allow parents, teachers, and outside members an opportunity to have a say as to what changes will made in their child's school without facing repercussions from CPS officials. As for Meza, she hops CPS officials reinstate the original 2012-2013 academic school year before it's too late. "Our education is in jeopardy, "We will said Meza. continue to fight until we see a change." Velazquez could not be reached for comment.

Advancing a 'Shared Future' Through Local Latino Leaders

Strengthening the Latino nonprofit sector in economically challenging times, the Latino Policy Forum announced that 20-plus participants from local organizations were selected to participate in the fourth cohort of its Illinois Latino Nonprofit Leadership Academy.

The Academy invests in leadership to rectify two conflicting trends: the rising Latino population and the decrease in investment.

Even as the Latino population remains one of the fastest-growing segments in the country, just 1 percent of total foundation funding in the US has been dedicated to serving Latinos over the past decade, according to a collaborative report from the Foundation Center and Hispanics in Philanthropy released in December 2011. At the state level, Latinos are 16 percent of the state population in Illinois, having grown percent since 2000. But state funding to Latino organizations through its Human Services agency has dipped nearly 40 percent since Fiscal Year 2009, according to analysis from the Latino Policy Forum.

"Few programs focus specifically on building organizational and leadership skills in the Latino community. The Academy is unique in that it engages organizations across a large spectrum of size, budget and mission," said Executive Director of the Latino Policy Forum Sylvia Puente.

Organizations sending two delegates to participate in this year's cohort include, Blocks Together, Chicago Run, Evanston Coalition for Latino Resources, El Hogar del Niño, Family Focus DuPage, San Miguel School Chicago, and West Town Leadership United. Individual participants were selected from Casa Central, Chicago Commons, Erie Neighborhood House, Family Shelter Services, La Casa Norte, The Resurrection Project and Youth Service Project. For more information, visit www.latinopolicyforum.org.

'Parent Academies' to Help Boost Bilingual Education

By: Ashmar Mandou

Bilingual education in Illinois is about to change.

House Bill 3819, which was signed by Governor Pat Quinn earlier this month, will help fortify bilingual education by giving permission to the Illinois Advisory Council on Bilingual Education to observe and offer recommendations to the Illinois State Board of Education (ISBE) on the level of bilingual education in Illinois as well as help non-English speaking parents with the implementation of 'parent academies.'

The new 'parent academies' initiative is designed to educate and equip parents with the proper information and tools to better navigate their child's education. Parents will learn about standardized testing, homework completion strategies, and studentrelationships, teacher among other topics. In turn, the Advisory Council on Bilingual Education, which was created in 1992 to share insights and recommendations to ISBE, will study the practicability of 'parent academies' and how it assists immigrant families.

The new law intends to ensure every bilingual student is ready for the workforce, stated Gov. Quinn during the signing of the new law at Inter-American Magnet School on August 9th. "School is challenging enough for students and parents alike without having to struggle with a new language," he added.

A study by ISBE revealed there were 183,000 Illinois students in 2010 for whom English was not a first language. In addition, Spanish-speakers comprise 80 percent of students enrolled in English language programs, followed by Polish, Urdu, Arabic, and Koreanspeakers. The study also noted a growing number of non-English speaking students in areas, such as Elgin, Cicero, Aurora, and Waukegan.

HB 3819, sponsored by Representative Linda Chapa LaVia (D-Aurora) and Senator Iris Martinez (D-Chicago), requires the Advisory Council to assess the success rate of bilingual programs, examine the initiatives, such as 'parent academies' and 'cultural competency programs,' and submit a report to the State Superintendent of Education, Governor, and General Assembly.

"We are always looking for ways to help all students maximize their academic potential. This new law will help," said Sen. Martinez. The bill was supported by the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund (MALDEF) and passed in both chambers. The new law takes effect January 1st, 2013.
