Munoz Announces New Loan and Grant Programs for Small Business Owners

Small businesses in need of relief are invited to apply for two new emergency assistance programs, Assistant Majority Leader Tony Munoz (D-Chicago) announced last Thursday. "My district is home to many small businesses that embody the cultural diversity and pride of our city and state," Munoz said. "The COVID-19 outbreak has forced many of them to close, and we need to invest in them to preserve the economy and identity of our local neighborhoods." To provide assistance to struggling small business owners, Mayor Lori Lightfoot unveiled the Chicago Small Business Resiliency Fund, a $100 million program that will support low-interest loans of up to $50,000 for small businesses in Chicago. Businesses with fewer than 50 employees, have gross revenues of less than $3 million in 2019 and have suffered more than a 25 percent revenue decrease due to COVID-19 will be eligible to apply. Businesses interested in applying for a loan should complete this interest form and they will hear from a representative as soon as possible. Businesses can

Cook County Sees Nation's Second-Worst Population Decline of the Decade

Chicago and its surrounding suburbs experienced some of the largest population declines over the decade. According to U.S. Census Bureau data released, Cook County experienced the nation's second-largest population decline, losing a total of 48,783 residents since 2010, in raw terms. Only Wayne County, Mich., suffered worse population decline. New analysis from the nonpartisan Illinois Policy Institute shows this is the second straight year that all 10 metropolitan areas based primarily in Illinois lost population. From July 2018 to July 2019, the Chicago MSA, which includes Cook and 15 other surrounding counties, saw the third-largest raw decline in population of any metropolitan area in the nation, shrinking by more than 25,000 residents. The two years of population decline across all Illinois' metro areas occurred after the state's record-breaking income tax hike in 2017. Institute research indicates these historic losses are primarily due to residents moving on net from Illinois to other states.

El condado de Cook ve la segunda peor disminución de la población de la década en la nación

Chicago y sus suburbios circundantes experimentaron algunos de los mayores descensos de población durante la década. Según los datos de la Oficina del Censo de EE. UU. Publicados, el condado de Cook experimentó la segunda disminución de la población más grande del país, perdiendo un total de 48,783 residentes desde 2010, en términos crudos. Solo el condado de Wayne, Michigan, sufrió un peor descenso de la población. Un nuevo análisis del

Instituto de Políticas de Illinois no partidista muestra que este es el segundo año consecutivo en que las 10 áreas metropolitanas basadas principalmente en Illinois perdieron población. De julio de 2018 a julio de 2019, el MSA de Chicago, que incluye a Cook y otros 15 condados circundantes, experimentó el tercer descenso bruto de la población de cualquier área metropolitana de la nación, disminuyendo en más de 25,000 residentes. Los dos años de disminución de la población en todas las áreas metropolitanas de Illinois ocurrieron después del aumento récord del impuesto sobre la renta del estado en 2017. La investigación del Instituto indica que estas pérdidas históricas se deben principalmente a que los residentes se mudaron de Illinois a otros estados.

Mental Health Hotline During Stay at Home Order

After Governor Pritzker issued a statewide Stay at Home order, State Senator Celina Villanueva (D-Chicago) is sharing resources with community members on how to care for their mental health while at home. "This is a stressful time for working people who face job insecurity and are struggling to keep up with rent and put food on the table," Villanueva said. "Even for people who are fortunate enough to work from home, mental health care is more important now than ever." The National Alliance on Mental Illness (NAMI) has a 24-hour Chicago hotline at 833-626-4244 for anyone who may experience a mental health crisis. You can read NAMI Chicago's full statement on their services during the Stay at Home order at www.namichicago.org/blog/to-our-community. While Senator Villanueva's office is closed during the Stay at Home order, staff can be reached at 708-552-5225 to assist with any state services. Villanueva: Survivors of Domestic Abuse Can't Slip Through the Cracks

With domestic violence hotlines experiencing an increase in calls during the Stay at Home order, State Senator Celina Villanueva (D-Chicago) urged survivors to be aware of the options still available to them. "In the midst of this crisis, we can't let anybody slip through the cracks," Villanueva said. "Survivors need safety during the Stay at Home order and our community can step up and be there for them." If you or anyone you know may experience domestic violence during the Stay at Home order, the National Domestic Violence Hotline (1-800-799-7233) recommends creating a safety plan that considers travel restrictions and limited shelter options. Villanueva: los sobrevivientes de abuso doméstico no pueden pasar desapercibidos Con las líneas directas de violencia doméstica experimentando un aumento en las llamadas durante la orden de quedarse en casa, la senadora estatal Celina Villanueva (D-Chicago) instó a los sobrevivientes a estar al tanto de las opciones que todavía están disponibles para ellos. "En medio de esta crisis, no podemos dejar que nadie se escape", dijo Villanueva. "Los sobrevivientes necesitan seguridad durante el pedido de Stay at Home y nuestra comunidad puede intensificar y estar allí para ellos". Si usted o alguien que conoce puede experimentar violencia doméstica durante la orden de quedarse en casa, la línea directa nacional de violencia doméstica (1-800-799-7233) recomienda crear un plan de seguridad que considere las restricciones de viaje y las opciones limitadas de alojamiento. Hay más información disponible en inglés y español en bit.ly/NDVHcorona. Un nuevo informe mostró que la línea directa de violencia doméstica de Illinois (1-877-863-6338) está experimentando un aumento de casi 40 por ciento en las llamadas y sus refugios están en capacidad debido a las precauciones de salud pública. La línea telefónica seguirá siendo un servicio gratuito las 24 horas durante la crisis de COVID-19.

Illinois Domestic Violence Hotline (1-877-863-6338) is experiencing a nearly 40 percent increase in calls and its shelters are at capacity due to public health precautions. The phone line will remain a free, 24-hour service during the COVID-19 crisis.

What Heart Patients Should Know about Coronavirus

By: American Heart Association News

The coronavirus should have everyone's attention by now, health experts say. And people with heart disease have extra reasons to be alert.

COVID-19, the disease caused by the virus, was first reported in the Chinese city of Wuhan in December and has since sickened hundreds of thousands of people and killed thousands around the globe.

For people with underlying heart issues, the concerns are serious. It appears people over 65 with coronary heart disease or hypertension are more likely to be infected and to develop more severe symptoms. In February, the American College of Cardiology issued a bulletin to warn patients about the potential increased risk and to encourage "additional, reasonable precautions."

Based on early reports, 40 percent of hospitalized COVID-19 patients had cardiovascular disease or cerebrovascular disease (which refers to blood flow in the brain, such as stroke), according to the bulletin. Different areas of the country are seeing different levels of virus activity, though the virus is now in every state, and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention is advising those most at risk to stay home, to avoid crowds and to limit contact with others.

The virus could affect heart disease patients in several ways, said Orly Vardeny, associate professor of medicine at the Minneapolis VA Health Care System and University of Minnesota. The virus's main target is the lungs. But that could affect the heart, especially a diseased heart, which has to work harder to get oxygenated blood throughout the body, said Vardeny, an adviser on the ACC bulletin. "In general, you can think of it as something that is taxing the system as a whole."

That could exacerbate problems for someone with heart failure, where the heart is already having problems pumping efficiently.

Someone with an underlying heart issue also might have a less robust immune system. People's immune systems weaken as they age, Vardeny said. And "in those with chronic medical conditions, the body's immune response is not as strong a response when exposed to viruses."

If such a person catches a virus, she said, it's likely to stick around and cause complications.

A virus also may pose a special risk for people who have the fatty buildup known as plaque in their arteries, Vardeny said. Evidence indicates similar viral illnesses can destabilize these plaques, potentially resulting in the blockage of an artery feeding blood to the heart, putting patients at risk of heart attack.

Vardeny emphasized that information about COVID-19 is changing almost hourly. But previous coronaviruses, such as SARS and MERS, offer insight. They were linked to problems such as inflammation of the heart muscle, heart attack and rapid-onset heart failure, the ACC bulletin said.

COVID-19 also has similarities to influenza, said Vardeny, who is also a volunteer for the American Heart Association. At the moment, she said, "We don't think the actual risk is any higher per se. It's just that the spread is quicker." And unlike the flu, there's no vaccine.

The number of confirmed cases of COVID-19 is changing rapidly. The World Health Organization reported the fatality rate from the illness was between 2 percent and 4 percent in Wuhan, and 0.7 percent outside Wuhan.

By comparison, as of mid-March, the CDC estimated there had been at least 36 million flu illnesses, 370,000 hospitalizations and 22,000 deaths from it in the United States this season.

against the flu should be helpful against the new coronavirus, Vardeny said, because it appears to spread the same way – through droplets in the air when someone coughs or sneezes. For now, she suggests people defend themselves by hand-washing, keeping surfaces clean and avoiding travel to areas with outbreaks. On March 16, the White House asked Americans to follow new guidelines for two weeks that include avoiding gathering in groups of more than 10 people; and refraining from discretionary travel, shopping trips or social visits, as well as trips to restaurants or bars.

The ACC bulletin

recommends people with cardiovascular disease stay up to date with vaccinations, including for pneumonia.

The ACC also supports getting a flu shot to prevent another source of fever, which could potentially be confused with the coronavirus infection.

Dr. Nancy Messonnier, director of the National Center for Immunization and Respiratory Diseases, warned in a February news conference – before confirmed cases spread nationwide – that residents needed to prepare. Her agency is part of the CDC. Messonnier summed up her advice as, "Stay home if you're sick; cover your cough; wash your hands."

Since that news conference, the country has been dealing with widespread closures of work, school and more.

"I understand this whole situation may seem overwhelming and that disruption to everyday life may be severe," she said.
